RANDOLPH

Efforts Being Made to Locate a Novelty Factory in Town.

An effort is being made here to locate a novelty factory, several of the members of the Board of Trade taking steps to raise the money for an inducement for them to locate here. Mr. Palmer, who for years has conducted a business of this nature in Warren, had the misfortune to lose his building by fire and he would like to come here and form a partnership with Mr. Lewis, who now works at the foundry, if arrangements can be made that are satisfactory to all parties. A building is required and some money for an equipment, all amounting to about $2,500. The committee in charge has been investigating several buildings, among which is the old steam laundry building near the upper School street crossing. The committee has the refusal of this building and it will be decided this week as to the building and the acceptance of the offer. If definite arrangements are made the work will begin soon, and it is understood that the company has orders sufficient to keep it employed for some time. About a dozen hands will be employed at first and the force may be larger.

THE RETURN TO STRASBOURG.
A Notable Event in the History of the Alsatian City.

The cock on the old Strasbourg cathedral clock must have crowed more lustily at noon Sunday than he has on any other noon for the last 47 years. He is a French bird by every right, a symbol of France's unconquerable spirit and poise, and for all these long years he has been exploited for the benefit of Strasbourg visitors in German by Prussian veteran guides. The Prussian veteran guides; French soldiers who may have lost an arm or a leg in the Vosges fighting for the deliverance of Alsace will speak the language the cock knows. He is out of German bondage and his release is worth his strongest and longest claret note.

On Sept. 28, 1870, the Strasbourgers came out of the cellars and caves where they had sought refuge from the Prussian shells to see a white rag flying from the ruined tower of their cathedral. For seven weeks they had suffered every misery of a besieged city; to their prayer for milk for their children the Prussian high commander sent back the taunting reply, "Surrender, then you can have milk for your babies." To their plea that the besiegers turn their guns upon the fortifications of the town and not on their churches and houses—the Hun was then as he was in Attilla's time and in Belgium and northern France—the Prussians answered with a storm of shells until scarcely a building in the city escaped the ravages of the bombardment. Through all this suffering the people kept their faith and still shouted "Vive la France!" But the white rag on the cathedral tower. The cliffion blanc! "The rag of shame and dishonor," they cried.

When Marshal Petain entered the city it no longer was Strasbourg, but Strasbourg. It had taken 47 years to make the change; and in that time more than 50,000 Alsatians had given up their homes rather than suffer Prussian lordship. Their descendants are coming back to the land of their ancestry. The peasants flocked to Strasbourg from the Vosges and the Rhine plains; they came from Breisach and Thann, from Ollindenberg, from the Hochschollers castle of Hoh-Konigsburg and Rappoltswiller to St. Amarin-tal and St. Maunster-tal, the men in their sombre black with long hidden French flags on their breasts and their hats with streamers of tricolors, and the women with their black bow headresses and manifold and multi-colored petticoats. They came to dance in the broad Kiebler platz and gloriously to rejoice.

The humiliation and shame of the cliffion blanc can be forgotten in the light of the tricolor that flies at last in its place.—New York Sun.

Mexico—America's Balkan.

When Colonel Roosevelt calls Mexico America's Balkan problem, he tells the plain and simple, if unpalatable, truth. Our Monroe doctrine we only half maintain when we enjoy its privileges and shirk its obligations. From the Taft administration to the present time our government has dangled with Mexico and has mixed mending with middlemen words and deeds. To-day we have on our hands the bitter fruits of that policy—a land laid waste by anarchy, a nest of alien intrigues, a political plague spot whose existence has passed from being a menace merely to men and things American on both sides of the border, and becomes a nuisance to the civilized world.

It is not necessary to assess the blame for Mexico to-day in order to face and comprehend the duties and responsibilities which "the ghastly tragedy" across the Rio Grande imposes. Certainly our exhortation at the peace conference upon the duties of the old world in respect of the Balkans and of Russia and of Africa will have but little weight unless simultaneously we confess frankly and fully the sum of our shortcomings in Mexico and solemnly pledge ourselves to the restoration of law and order and hold ourselves responsible for its maintenance henceforth from the Rio Grande to the Panama canal. That is our job. We can do it, we ought to do it, we ought to have done it long ago. Our failure to do it made us misjudged the world over, invited Germany's contempt and consequent aggressions upon us, and gave them and others the erroneous impression that we were "too proud to fight."

By telling us once more, toward the close of the year, the hard truth about Mexico, Colonel Roosevelt has again served his countrymen, and his words, we hope, will stiffen their New Year resolution to compel a cleanup of the Mexican mess before we assume the government of all humanity.—Boston Transcript.

TO ELIMINATE GERMAN.

From the Courses of Instruction in the American Schools.

New York, Dec. 30.—A nation-wide campaign is being conducted by the American Defense society to eliminate the teaching of German in the schools throughout the United States. In a letter written the principals of "public schools, private schools and colleges throughout the country the society urges that French, Italian, Spanish and Russian should be given prominence in the curriculum with a view to strengthening trade relations between these countries. The letter, which is signed by Dr. William T. Hornaday, reads:

"Reports are rife that with the ending of the war there is to be an attempt to force upon our American youth the language of the people whose hands are stained with the blood of their fathers and brothers. The German language has been used as a weapon directed at the heart of America by German propagandists. It is the opinion of many of our prominent educators that German is not an essential in any course of study, and it is to be hoped that our American youth will not permit its being forced upon them for any reason whatsoever. The next five years will witness a crystallization of educational opinion and upon that crystallization will depend the future of American education."

"For those who study a language for its future utility the choice lies between French, Spanish, Italian and Russian as our relations with these countries will be immeasurably increased now that peace is in sight. To study German would be to condone the atrocities perpetrated by the people who speak this language."

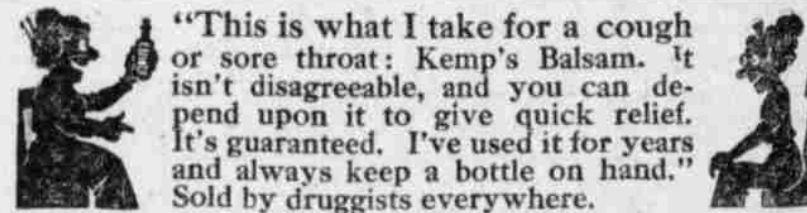

Food Work at Public Markets.
All last summer a live public market in Pittsfield, Mass., brought consumers and producers more closely together. The home demonstration agents of Berkshire county, who worked under the direction of the department of agriculture and the Massachusetts state agricultural college at Amherst, took advantage of the gathering of people at the market and conducted a demonstration on food conservation and preservation. Questions were answered, people were urged to conserve and preserve, and canned goods were exhibited. From 75 to 175 people visited the booth each day. The same plan was carried out successfully at North Adams in the same county.

One Step Meets Two Needs.
Fields in Hamilton county, Ohio, that were acid in soil and broken by stone outcroppings have been made more productive and easier to plow by the one step of crushing the stone and spreading it over the ground. The stone is limestone with a high percentage of calcium. This method of solving the liming problem was developed by the county agent. Some men bought stone crushers and entered the business of grinding limestone.

Of the 5,000 tons of lime applied in Hamilton county on the county agent's recommendation 2,000 tons were ground on the 50 farms where the stone was found.
